

Walking with Moons: Humor and Drama in Love

By Kate Deford

Dreamschooner Press, United States, 2014. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 198 x 129 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Walking With Moons is engaging and, at times, poignant fiction about relationships between men and women as seen through the eyes of fifty-five women. Similar to favorite songs, each story has a unique melody that lingers. Often without any background information, author Kate Deford places you in the middle of a relationship letting you listen to defining conversations or thoughts in the lives of her characters. With masterful use of double entendres, Deford writes stand-alone stories making Walking With Moons a memorable journey that readers will want to share with partners and friends. The following descriptions are about seven different comedic works from the fifty-five brief stories included in Walking With Moons: *How will their marriage survive after she reveals her Tuesdays with the bread man? *During their first dinner together, she lies to the waiter. Can her date trust anything that follows? *An elderly couple can't understand each other, but have a perfectly nice conversation anyway. *After her husband's death, a woman uses her compact mirror to reflect on life. *Shopping for his...

Good electronic book and valuable one. It really is basic but unexpected situations in the 50 percent in the pdf. You won't really feel monotony at any moment of your time (that's what catalogues are for concerning when you ask me).
