His bare feet clung to the sloping surface like a fly to a smooth wall; he pulled the boat alongside the pier, holding it by the gunwale, and held up his other hand to help Zenon. But the Venetian was in no need of that, and was standing beside his companion in an instant. It was only then, a whole second after the fact, that he knew he had stepped upon something oddly soft and at the same time elastic and resisting, that lay amidships in the bottom of the boat, covered with canvas. The quick recollection was that of having unconsciously placed one foot on a human body when getting out. He had taken off his shoes, but the cloth soles of his hose were thick, and he could not feel sure of what he had touched. Besides, he had no time to lose in speculating as to what Gorlias might have in the skiff besides his lines and his coil of rope. Gorlias now got the end of the fishing-line ashore, and took it in his teeth in order to climb up the inclined plan of the pier on his hands and feet, a fashion. In a few seconds he had found the end of a string that hung down from the blackness above, with a small stone tied to it to keep it from being blown adrift. To this string he bent the fishing-line. Until this was done...
